1. Meet the "Youth Served" criteria above
2. Complete an admissions application (including providing supporting paperwork)
3. Participate in a face-to-face Interview

These requirements help VHBG conduct an assessment of the youth to ensure s/he is suitable for services.

Admission&Orientation

Upon admission, the youth is oriented to the program and apartment and begins receiving individualized case management services and independent living skills development.

Discharge

Discharge from the program falls under three categories: voluntary discharge, involuntary discharge, or elopement. Voluntary Discharge is based on one or more of the following:

- Youth has met the goals in the service plan
- Youth has secured housing
- At the time of the youth's eighteenth (18th) birthday, or any time thereafter, the youth requests separation from the program with notification of intent
- Youth is accepted to an educational program out of the state or locality
- Youth enters the Armed Forces

Discharge planning for Voluntary Discharge is a continuous process occurring in partnership with the youth (and guardian, as applicable) that begins at the point of admission and leads toward the goal of successful independent living in the community.

Involuntary Discharge is based on one or more of the following:

- Youth poses a serious threat to self or others due to violent behavior or criminal activities
- Youth poses an immediate or continuing substantial threat to the health, safety, and well-being of others and/or self
- The severity of the youth's psychiatric and/or medical condition requires care beyond what is provided by the program
- Youth refuses to adhere to the program agreement
- Youth under the age of eighteen elopes from the program and the legal guardian decides to terminate services

If an Involuntary Discharge is required, the Case Worker will collaborate with the youth (and guardian, as applicable) to coordinate a discharge to a more suitable environment.

Elopement: Discharge due to elopement occurs when a youth (age eighteen or older) vacates the living arrangement without notification and with no apparent intent to return.
